Joseph Cohen-Lyons is an Associate lawyer at the Hicks Morley Toronto office and currently practices in all areas of labour and employment law. Joseph provides advice and representation to employers and management on a wide range of labour and employment issues including labour disputes, grievance arbitrations, wrongful dismissals, employment standards, employment contracts, privacy, human rights and accommodation, and occupational health and safety.

Joseph obtained his J.D. from Queen's University, where he won the 2007 David Sabbath prize in Criminal Law. Prior to law school, he attended Dalhousie University where he graduated with a B.A. in Sociology with a minor in Law and Society. Prior to joining Hicks Morley, Joseph worked in a legal clinic where he represented federal inmates in administrative matters, including disciplinary court hearings and hearings before the National Parole Board of Canada. Joseph articulated with Hicks Morley before being called to the bar in 2010.
